SULZER'S FIRST MOVE WILL BE A DEMAND FOR DISMISSAL OF CHARGES

Impeached Governor Confident of Victory at the Trial Which Opens To-Morrow, but Will Fight Every Inch of Ground.

By Samuel M. Williams.

(Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Gov. Sulzer spent the last day before his impeachment trial secluded in the Executive Mansion, conferring with counsel and receiving a few confidants.

The Governor's confidence has wonderfully increased during the past twenty-four hours. News from Buffalo of the overthrow of the Tammany boss Fitzpatrick and from Osage that his former friend, Bulger, who turned to Tammany, had suffered similar fate in the primaries have given fresh courage to the impeached executive. He will fight and fight hard, contesting every inch of ground and every technical point.

The impeachment trial promises to be a fight with prolonged argument over methods of legal procedure. A dozen or more puzzling questions must be decided before the Governor is brought in to face his accusers and listen to the reading of articles of impeachment. Presiding Judge Cullen will leave to the entire court—judges and Senators together—determination of these questions. Neither he nor the Judges of the Court of Appeals will presume to pass upon them for the Senators.

The order of voting is one important question to be determined after the court meets. The question is whether the Judges and Senators will come in strict alphabetical order.

Judge Cullen believes the whole court must decide upon its own methods of procedure. It is assumed that the opening session to-morrow will be devoted largely to technical questions.

From the Sulzer forces comes information that every hostile move will be contested. The Governor's lawyers, led by the astute E. Cady Kerrick, will attempt to block the entire proceedings at the start with motions to dismiss the charges.

They will contend that the impeachment indictment voted by the Assembly was illegal because that body was in special session and had not been summoned for any such purpose. They will contend that no act committed prior to the Governor's induction into office can be considered in the proceedings. Their objection will be based on the ground that the act alleged to constitute a crime calling for impeachment.

Mrs. Sulzer will be one of the most important witnesses for the defense, according to the Governor's friends. She will tell her own story of the stock deals in her own way before the bar of the impeachment court. This will lead to an intensely human touch to a prosecution which is now purely legal.

MAYOR WON'T HAVE ANY RESIGNATIONS.
Refuses to Accept Those of the Heads of the City Departments.

Mayor Kline, on his arrival at City Hall today, was asked whether the heads of city departments, other than Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, had resigned in the same spirit as Mr. Smith. The Mayor replied:

"I have received no written resignations but practically all of the Commissioners have expressed themselves to that effect to me orally. I gave them all the same answer. I gave Mr. Smith that I did not want their resignations."

Harwood of E. W. W. Very Ill.
William H. Harwood, the E. W. W. leader, is seriously ill at the Washington Square Hotel. It was stated this afternoon at the E. W. W. headquarters here.

He is suffering from intestinal trouble. He had planned to go west with his family, but the trip has been postponed owing to Harwood's condition.

TRIP TO CONCORD ONE OF TRIUMPH FOR HARRY THAW

Cheered by Crowds as He Leaves Littleton and at Stations on Way.

HUSTLED INTO A HACK.

Many Persons in All Sorts of Vehicles Follow Him to His Hotel.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 17.—Harry K. Thaw reached this city from Littleton at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon and was taken to a hotel. Several hundred persons were at the passenger station and cheers were heard as Thaw alighted from the train and made his way to a hack.

Thaw will have a hearing before Gov. Parker next Tuesday on the matter of his extradition to New York.

Thaw made the entire trip from Littleton in a day coach. Thaw greeted him at every station, and at every opportunity he leaned from the car window to shake hands. A clergyman and a man eighty years old were among those who wished him good luck.

Thaw lunched in the station at Plymouth and ate heartily. The curious besieged the restaurant while he ate. But his greatest ovation was here at Concord. Thaw lifted his hat in response to the cheers, but so swiftly was he taken to his carriage that the crowd could do no more than pass mildly about him. Many persons in vehicles of all descriptions and on foot followed him to the hotel.

Safe in the knowledge that the United States District Court will review his case on a writ of habeas corpus if he loses in Concord, the Massachusetts fugitive was light-hearted and smiled and waved at the crowds which cheered him on his way to the railroad station at Littleton.

Thaw celebrated his court victory of yesterday over William Travers Jerome by playing the piano in the parlor of the hotel where he had been quartered in Littleton. Around him sat an admiring throng of hotel patrons. He played classical music mostly and avoided the modern ragtime. For over an hour he was at the piano, and he would have played longer had not his chaperon, United States Marshal Note and Sheriff Drew, told him it was bedtime.

Ex-Gov. Stone of Pennsylvania was the only lawyer with Thaw to-day. The others, satisfied with their work in having the Federal habeas corpus hearing indefinitely postponed, left town last night to rest before the extradition hearing.

"Gentleman" Thompson, Thaw's chauffeur, is set free. SHERBROOKE, Quebec, Sept. 17.—"Gentleman" Roger Thompson, the chauffeur who drove Harry K. Thaw away from Mattawoman in a big black touring car, was today set at liberty. The Crown authorities said they had no evidence to offer against him.

Thompson was arrested a few days after the arrest of Thaw, on a charge of entering Canada by stealth and bringing a lunatic into the country. With Thaw out of Canada, the Immigration authorities who caused Thompson's arrest concluded that there was nothing to be gained by keeping him in custody. The chauffeur was discharged by Judge Mulvena, before whom he appeared.

WHALE RAMS STEAMER, KNOCKS HOLE IN BOW
ST. JOHN, N. F., Sept. 17.—A collision with a whale caused serious damage to the Danish steamer Wladimir Ritz that the vessel was forced to put in here to-day for repairs. The accident occurred Monday afternoon two hundred and fifty miles east of St. John. The crew first saw the whale approaching at terrific speed, but could not alter the ship's course in time to prevent the impact. The leviathan struck the steamer head on, knocking a four foot hole in the bow. The accident is believed to have killed the whale, for it sank immediately, its blood discoloring the water over a large area.

The steamer left Cambleton, N. B., Sept. 11 for Plymouth, England, with lumber. She will have to discharge her cargo to permit repairs being made.

BROOKLYN MAN KILLED IN ODD AUTO ACCIDENT
Tonneau Detached and E. P. Connolly and Two of His Friends Are Thrown Out.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Sept. 17.—E. P. Connolly, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was killed today when he was pitched headlong from a speeding automobile at Wrennerville, Pa. One of his companions, E. P. Gayton, of Woodbury, N. J., and E. J. Hines, of Philadelphia, were also thrown out, but were only slightly injured.

The accident was caused by the tonneau being detached.

GET $115,000 LOOT FROM THREE HOMES CLOSED FOR SEASON

Burglars Establish Smelter and Melt Down Plate in Wallach Home.

Discriminating Taste Shown, as Only Articles of Merit Are Taken.

The return of householders to-day from the summer spent in the country developed the fact that three homes in the exclusive section east of Central Park and between Park and Lexington avenues had been robbed some time during the hot months of valuables amounting to $115,000. The names of the families whose houses were cleaned out by thieves and the amounts reported to the police as having been lost by each are scheduled on the blotter thus:

Mrs. Karl M. Wallach, No. 120 East Seventy-ninth street; furs, paintings, tapestries, silverware and jewelry to the amount of $100,000.

Mrs. Jacob Klingenstein, No. 102 East Seventy-ninth street, on the same bloc; silverware and furs to the value of $10,000.

Joseph Livingston, No. 135 East Eighty-ninth street; silverware valued at $5,000.

BUTLER FINDS TOWN HOUSE RANSACKED COMPLETELY.
The heaviest robbery, that of the home of Mrs. Wallach, was discovered when Paul Brown, the butler, returned to the Wallach town house from Deal Beach, N. J., where the Wallach family had been spending the summer, to put it in order for their return to the city. What the butler discovered sent him to the telephone immediately and to-day Mrs. Wallach, who is the widow of a wealthy construction engineer, her son Harry K. Wallach, and her daughter, Miss Martha Wallace, hurried up from the Jersey resort to find the interior of their home a ruin.

They had been gone since early in June, and during their absence the burglars had gained entrance to their five-story brownstone house by the roof scuttle. It was evident to-day that the thieves had taken their time in stripping the house of everything portable that had value, even going to the extent of establishing a small smelting furnace in the bedroom on the third floor wherein they melted the silver down to more convenient ingots. The pot and lamp remained where they had been put to this use.

The Wallachs had gone away from home leaving everything of value except their jewelry in the home unprotected. Chief of these valuables were two chests of silver, that of the family and a wedding chest belonging to a daughter, Miss Bella, who married Edwin Bendheim soon before the summer removal to Deal Beach. The Wallach silver was valued at $2,500, according to the statement of Harry Wallach, and that of Mrs. Bendheim at $4,000.

Not a single piece of either collection had been left by the burglars. On the third floor a "cedar closet," used for the storing of furs, had been completely looted. Fox, mink and sable pelts belonging to Mrs. Wallach and her two daughters and approximately $3,000 in value were taken from this closet.

A Persian Wilkes landscape in oils, worth $2,500, was cut from its frame in the parlor, several rare tapestries were stolen from the same room and numerous articles of bric-a-brac about which there were gold frames or which in themselves were intrinsically valuable were not overlooked.

FINGER PRINT GIVES DETECTIVES SINGLE CLUE.
That the thieves had been careless as to the route they made in looting the house was evident. Placards framed had been thrown on the floor and broken, and numerous fragile articles of vertu trampled underfoot in a wanton spirit of destruction.

When Detectives Under and Charney of the East Sixty-ninth street station found the Wallach house to-day they found a smelter for silver and a small furnace. If a suspect is arrested, this was a perfect fingerprint on the dirt glass side of a silver plated eating dish in the dining room. Aside from that there was nothing to lead to the capture of the cool thieves.

The house of Mrs. Jacob Klingenstein, a few doors removed on the same bloc, had been entered the same way

—via the roof scuttle—and there the same deliberate selection of plunder had been made. Silverware and furs were the articles drawn upon by the discriminating thieves.

The Livingston home at No. 135 East Eighty-ninth street was closed today and no details of the robbery there have been given out by the detectives until the looting.

Baby Outfit Found by Police as Well as Women's Garments and Toilet Articles—New Landlady Recognized Priest's Picture.

BOGUS DENTIST MURET SOUGHT BY LONDON POLICE.

Complete Counterfeiting Outfit Is Found in Rooms of Man Who Was Priest's Closest Friend.

Personal effects of Anna Aumuller, the victim of Hans Schmidt, the Jekyll-Hyde priest, were found to-day in a flat at No. 2562 Eighth avenue, which was rented by Schmidt on Sept. 5, three days after the murder was committed at No. 68 Bradhurst avenue. Among the articles were found an infant's garments, partially complete, indicating that the woman was constructing a layette for a baby that she expected.

Investigations by the police show that Schmidt rented the Eighth avenue flat under an assumed name, to use it as a storage place for the blood-stained, tell-tale evidence he had left behind in the Bradhurst avenue flat. The discovery of parts of Anna Aumuller's body in the North River and the consequent police search and newspaper publicity spoiled his plans.

George Blauvelt, a patrolman attached to a special squad, visited his sister, Fannie Blauvelt, who keeps house for her father in a flat at the Eighth avenue address, last night. Miss Blauvelt told her brother that the housekeeper, Mrs. Dowd, was worried about an apartment on the fourth floor that she had rented to a man who looked like the pictures of Schmidt. Blauvelt saw Mrs. Dowd, who said she was sure she rented a flat to Schmidt on Sept. 5. To-day Blauvelt made a report to Inspector Faurot, who directed him to investigate.

Mrs. Dowd said that in the late afternoon of Sept. 5 a man in layman's clothing who gave the name of Jacob Schneider and said he was a machinist called and asked to be shown vacant flats. After carefully examining the locks and window fastenings of a four-room flat on the fourth floor he rented the apartment and paid the rent for one month, $14, in advance.

In the late afternoon of the next day the man known to Mrs. Dowd as Schneider appeared again, carrying two suitcases. He deposited them in the fourth floor flat, locked the door and went away. She did not see him again, but when the newspapers told of Schmidt's arrest for the murder of Anna Aumuller she recognized his photograph as that of Schneider.

Blauvelt, with a key furnished by Mrs. Dowd, entered the flat to-day. In one of the four rooms, which were unfurnished, he found a leather suit case and a rattan suitcase, which he took to Police Headquarters, where they were opened.

These suitcases constituted the baggage of Anna Aumuller. In the leather case was a quantity of women's wearing apparel, gloves and underwear, and a box filled with needles, silk thread and other materials for embroidery. There was also an embroidered frons and some models of the letter "A" which was embroidered on the pillow slip in which part of the body was wrapped.

A baby's flannel undershirt was found in the suitcase. This had apparently served as a model from which Anna Aumuller had cut up considerable material, ready to be sewed together into little shirts. There was also other material for baby's clothing cut out but not sewed up. Material was there for almost a complete baby's wardrobe.

Besides a bellotero colored linen dress, which showed signs of wear, a photograph of Anna Aumuller and a photograph of Schmidt, the leather suit case also contained a gray and black striped pair of trousers and a waistcoat to match, both marked "Van Dyke" and bearing the label of a tailor in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. These two garments corresponded with the gray and black striped coat found in the murder flat in Bradhurst avenue marked "Van Dyke," which was one of the names Schmidt used in his providence about. Undoubtedly this is the suit he wore when he killed Anna
